A Week's Arrest

By GENERAL CHARLES

KING, Author of "The Colonel's Daughter,"

"Foes In Ambush," Etc. Copyright, 1909, by J. B. Lippincott

Synopsis.

Trooper Rawdon and Sergeant Fitzroy, lovers of Dora Mayhew, quarrel in Dr. Mayhew's home. Mayhew and Lleutenant Lanler interfors. Lanler, lover of Miriam Arnold, is ordered in arrest for disobeying, Colonel Button's orders..

Trooper Rawdon is ordered arrested for assaulting Sergeant Fitzroy. He disappears. Mirlam gets a fright at Sumter's home. Colonel Button and Captain Sumter, quarrel over Lanier's case.

Fort Cushing has a blizzard. Major Scott, paymaster, is lost. Fitzroy accuses Rawdon of attacking Scott. Mirlams fright was caused by a third in her am's fright was caused by a thief in her room. Lanier gives whisky to two freez-ing soldiers, Quinlan and Cassidy. Quinian finds Rawdon's cap at Lanier's house.

Detectives investigate the thief's invasion of Miriam's room. Scott is found.

Kate Sumter and Miriam refuse to talk

Lanier denies writing unfriendly articles about Button. Button accuses him of lending his civilian clothing to Rawdon. Fitzroy produces the clothing found in Rawdon's room in town. Button also accuses Lanier of leaving his quarters while in arrest. Lanier narrowly escapes and pursues. The elopers are caught by Rawdon and Lanier's friend Ennis. Fitzroy tries to arrest Rawdon, but Enris lets him and his bride, Dora, go.

Dora Mayhew elopes with Rawdon. Fitzroy steals Lieutenant Foster's team

Colonel Riggs arrives to try Lanier on Button's charges. Captain Snaffle accuses Lanier of being Miriam's thief.
Miriam declares she knows the author of the newspaper articles Lanier is ac-capegrace cousin.

Lowndes, confesses that he caused most of the trouble that involved Lanier. He was Miriam's thief. Fitzroy is discredited, Lanier absolved of all blame, and Mirlam and Lanier are reunited.

order that summoned him, and from that conference forth went our doughty dragoon in search of conquest. "It is understood," said the officials, "that you know the circumstances under which Lieutenant Lanier became responsible for the money borrowed at Laramie by or for that young Mr. Lowndes, also that you know him." There were other matters, but that came up first. Stannard knew and was quite willing to set forth with a plain clothes member of the Omaha ce on a mission for and from headquarters. He found it all known to the police. Lowndes had run through the purse of his eastern kindred two years before, Lowndes had been transported to a cattle ranch near Fort Cushing in hopes of permanent benefit, but speedily neglected the range for the more congenial society of the fort. He was well born and bred. He went on the campaign for excitement and took to gambling among the scouts and packers and sergeants, for the officers had soon cold shouldered him. But he was a college man, a secret society man, as had been Lieutenant Lanier before entering the Point. Since the campaign Lowndes had been going from bad to worse, had gambled away the money sent him by his relatives, and they were now sorely anxious about him. Moreover, he was needed as a material witness for the defense in the case of Lieutenant

And even as the story was being told there came bounding down the broad stairway from above a slender, well built youth. It was the erect, jaunty carriage that caught the major's eye. In build, bearing and gait the ap proaching stranger was Bob Lanier all over.

"Rawdon!" he cried.

A wave of color, it is true, swept instantly to the young fellow's temples. Quickly be whirled about; courteously he raised his cap.

"I beg the major's pardon," said he.
"I did not expect him here and had never seen him in civilian dress."

And now the detective, too, was on his feet and curiously noting the pair. "You're on furlough, I understand, but I heard-my wife said-you were in Chicago." "Mrs. Stannard was right, sir. My wife and her father are there now, vietting my sister. Dr. Maybew told me of the charges against Lieutenant Lanier, and that is what brings me back at once." "Going back at once?" began the major, mollified, yet mystified. "1 presume you know more of these matters than any one else." "With possibly two exceptions, sir. I hope to nab one of them here."

"Lowndes?" queried Stannard.

"Lowndes," answered Rawdon. "Then you're just the man we want."

That afternoon as the Union Pacific express stood ready at the Union station for the start there bearded one of the sleepers a burly, thickset, bluff mannered man in a huge fur overcoat, closely followed by two younger companions. One of these latter, erect and graceful in bearing, alert and quick in every movement, with clear cut and handsome features, was dressed with care and taste, evidently a man accustomed to metropolitan scenes and society. The other, a youth of probably his own age, though looking older, was sallow, shabby, with a dejected, down at the beel expression fallibly of failure and humiliation. "Better pull off that overcoat and make yourself comfortable. Lowndes." said the younger man. "You've a long seat and, brushing the burly man aside, precipitated herself upon the shrinking object in the corner.

"Mortimer Watson Lowndes!" cried she. "Where on earth have you been?"

Mortimer Watson wept dismally. Two days later the colonel's office at Fort Cushing was the scene of a somewhat remarkable trial. The tribunal consisted, in point of fact, of a single man, acting as judge, jury and attorney-to wit, "Black Bill" Riggs, inspector general of the department of the Platte.

Colonel Button was of course at his usual desk. Colonel Riggs, his jealcusly regarded rival, was seated at a little table. Lieutenant Lanier, somewhat pale, but entirely placid, occupied a chair to the left of that table, with Captain Sumter, as his troop commander and counsel, by his side. Captain Snaffle was in support of the post commander to cross question if he saw fit. Barker, the adjutant, was present, cused of writing. Lanier tells her he loves her. Rawdon appears and tells how Lanier befriended Lowndes, Miriam's in his heart was flitting measily in his heart was flitting measily in his heart, was flitting uneasily about.

> "If you are ready, Colonel Button," began Riggs with elaborate courtesy, "I am, and let me briefly say that I have seen Trooper Rafferty at the hospital, also certain other men named by Captain Snaffle, but in order that all parties may be given opportunity to hear and to examine and at the request of Lleutenant Lanier, who desires the fullest investigation and publicity, I have invited you and the captain to hear what I consider the really valuable evidence. Will you call in Trooper Rawdon?"

Snaffle's face was a sight when the door opened and there entered a very self possessed voting man.

"What's he mean by coming here in 'cits?' " said Snaffle. "Yes, Colonel Riggs; if this man's a soldier why isn't be in uniform?" With perfect respect, at a nod from Riggs, the newcomer replied, "My uniforms and other belongings of mine were taken from my trunk in town during my absence."

"You could have borrowed one," said Snaffle truculently. "I told him he need not," retorted

Riggs. "Mr. Rawdon, you were a duly enlisted trooper, I believe. Take that chair."

"And am still, sir." "But your discharge is ordered."

"It was applied for and recommended, and General Whipple told me in Chicago a few days ago it was settled, but that would have made no difference, sir. I should have been proud to wear the uniform until officially discharged."

Riggs wheeled in his chair. "Colonel Button, it has been fully explained to this man and to the next that what they tell us here is to be just what they would swear to before a court. You can decide for yourself on hearing it whether you wish them to swear to it or not. Now, Rawdon, tell us how you came to enlist."

"As the representative of three newspapers in Chicago and the east. They were anxious to have an Indian campaign and the life of an enlisted man described as it really was. I joined a squad of recruits for this regiment right after the news of the Crazy Horse battle on Powder river."

"Do you still hold that job?" "No, sir." And there was a twitch of the muscles about the corners of the mouth suggestive of amusement.

"Why?" "I failed to-give satisfaction. Only scraps of my letters were published." "What did they want?"

"Criticism principally and confirmation of the stories of abuse and ill treatment of soldiers by their officers." "Were your letters never published?" "Three of them eventually, after the campaign, in the New York Morning Whereupon Riggs spun in his chair and rejoicefully surveyed Button, who sat like a man in a daze, staring open eyed at the witness. "Then, as I understand it, you were favorably impressed with the life and conditions? "In spite of hardship and privation, yes, sir, and because I found complete refutation of the stories about the officers, both as regarded their dealing with the Indians and with their own men.' "Were there any persons with the command who knew you and your mission?

"Two, sir, as it turned out, Trooper Cary, who enlisted at the same time I did, and a civilian. Mr. Lowndes, who recognized us at Fort Frayne. We were at college together. He and Cary became very intimate toward the last, and yet I think they kept my secret in spite of our falling out." "Do you care to tell us why you fell

"I prefer that Mr. Loyades should do that. He and Cary had been chums man in an adjoining section slowly in college days, and though we were in the same socie's know

"You had trouble with Sergeant Fitzroy at first. We have heard his ersion. What is yours?"

Rawdon's eyes never flinched. "It was partly on account of the lady who is now my wife and partly on account of-money. Fitzroy is an out and out usurer and has a dozen sergeants in the regiment in his debt and under his thumb, Captain Snaffle's first sergeant among them."

"It's a lie!" said Snaffle. "It's the truth," said Riggs, "and I have other proofs. You will curb your tongue and your temper, Captain Snaffle, if you please. Go on, Rawdon."

"I had reason to believe he was squeezing Dr. Mayhew. I had learned to love Mayhew's daughter. I made Dr. Mayhew take enough to free himself and won Fitzroy's hate on both accounts."

"You are accused of assaulting him the night of the 16th. What of that?" "I did not even see him or speak to noon arranging for our marriage. Dr. Mayhew would not hear of it until I had got my discharge, but we had decided to be married Saturday morning and to go east that afternoon, as important business called me. Mr. scandals? Lowndes will tell you that he owed me much money. I had lost my position as correspondent, needed the cash and pressed him for it. He had promised faithfully to have it ready, but ready it was not. I knew of his relatives in Massachusetts and urged him to telegraph, but he said he cound get some of it at least at the fort. So I drove him and Cary out in a sleigh, left them at the store and, circling the fort, spent two hours with Miss Maybew, then, getting uneasy, as they did not come, drove round back to the store just in time to see Lieutenant Foster's sleigh going like the wind to town and found Rafferty in frantic excitement. He said there was hell to pay. The lieutenant was in arrest. Lowndes and Cary had run away with some of his clothes. There'd been a shindy up the row, and just then a the 16th." soldier friend came running. 'Skip for your life, Rawdon,' said he. 'There's been robbery at Captain Sumter's, and Sergeant Fitzroy swears it was you and that you've struck him and assaulted him. The colonel orders you arrested wherever found. The patrols are out now!' There was no time to explain. I lashed my team to

"There was nothing remarkable in that. I had heard of the same thing being done at West Point. I heard in the nick of time of the order to the officer round to his tent and into his kets."

"Did the lieutenant know of it or of the reason?"

"Never, so far as I know. I doubt if he knows it now. Lowndes told me happiness, and drink three or four the lieutenant before he entered West times, and finally left him with a half Point was a member of our fraternity. That was enough." "And so far as I am concerned." said

Riggs, "that is enough. Have you gentlemen any questions to ask?" "Not-now," answered Button slow-

CHAPTER IX.

NE more witness appeared before this court that day and with him the tall, elderly civilian who had arrived from the east. Mr. Arnold came in with a very puzzled look in his face. "Thank you for coming, Mr. Arnold," said Riggs, with bluff civility. "Pray take this chair, sir. As I have explained to you, Mr. Lowndes, your nephew could not be compelled to testify before a military court and need not make public admission here of what he told us at Rawdon's demand during our journey hither. I hope this is fully understood."

Mr. Arnold cleared his throat, and he began: "My unhappy nephew realizes with.

I trust, genuine contrition that he has been the cause of grave trouble, not only to us, his kindred in the east, but west. He has, prompted, as we must admit, by Mr.-Mr. Rawdon, made a clean breast of his lamentable conduct and has promised Mr. Rawdon to repeat every word of it-er-to Colonel Button, but as his"-

"Then we'll waste no time," said Riggs impatiently. "We'll have him in, and I can catch the afternoon train. Ah. come in. Mr. Lowndes. Sit down, toward Bob, and the nervous hands started the slouch hat in swifter revolution.

"Mr. Lanier, sir." "How came that?"

"Er-let me explain, gentlemen," interposed Mr. Arnold. "My sister is of a very sympathetic nature, and her heart has long been wrung by the injustice to the Indian. When this unhappy boy wrote those letters she had no reason to doubt their entire truth."

"I will ask you what was his final explanation of his need for money?" "He begged me to send him $200, saying he would be disgraced if he could not pay Lieutenant Lanier, who had won it from him at cards."

"Mr. Lowndes," said Riggs, "did Lieutenant Lanier ever win a dollar from you?"

"Never, sir!" Riggs let him rest a minute, then went on, "Now, then, in your own way tell us what happened that night of

For a few seconds there was silence. Then, suddenly uplifting his head and looking at no one, Lowndes desperately plunged into his narrative. "I-Iwas mad. I suppose, with debt and misery, and I began to drink. Rawdon told me he must have the money. My uncle had flatly refused to send me more. There was left me only one town, caught Lowndes in cavalry over- way, and that was through my Cousin coat and cap, the fool, and with not a Miriam. We'd almost been brought cent to his name. I gave Cary a note up together. But I knew if I could see her she would help me.

"Rawdon had changed into citizen's clothes in town, and I had pawned my overcoat, so he lent me his cavalry overcoat and a fur cap, drove me and Cary out to the fort and left us at the store. We were chilled from the ride Riggs-"that night at Laramie of and drank more. Rafferty told me Mr. Lanier was officer of the guard. We filled Rafferty up, for Cary had made up his mind he was going to Rawdon's wedding in 'cits' instead of soldier clothes, and he was bent on borrowing a suit of Lieutenant Laof the day to inspect for Lieutenant | nier's. He swore he'd return them Lanier. I imagined that something the next day, and Rafferty let him very serious would happen to him. I have them. Then he and I went up knew he'd gone to the post with the rear fence and caught sight of No. Lowndes and why. So, with my apol- 5-Trooper Kelly. Cary went ahead ogies now to the lieutenant, I slipped to 'fix things,' as he said. Kelly was spicious. Cary to quiet him told him he was Lieutenant Lanier; that we were helping Rawdon get ready for his wedding. "He made Kelly drink to Rawdon's full flask up the row toward Major Stannard's. Then we went to Captain Sumter's. Kelly told Cary the servants were in at Captain Snaffle's. The door was open. Cary watched below while I hunted for my cousin's room. I found it easily. I knew they had sent her money and orders to come home. Uncle had written me as much. I found her desk. I knew it well of old, and then, to my horror, I heard her voice, and in a second she was in the room. She gave one awful scream, though I tore off my cap and begged her to know me, but she fell in a faint. Others were coming. I broke out of the back window and slid and scrambled down the roof to the shed and so to the ground. I heard men come running, so I dived into the coal shed, where the sergeant grabbed me in the dark, and I had to make him let go and-said I was Lieutenant Lanier. Later I crawled through a hole in the fence and started for the store, scared out of my wits. Right at the next gate I crashed into two men. I picked myself and cap up and ran again, caught Cary at the store just jumping into a sleigh, and we lashed those horses every inch of the way, left them at a ranch gaie and ran to the station. -er-to you military gentlemen in the Rawdon presently came, and he took me to Omaha. He, too, had to get away or be thrown into the guard-

"You have that overcoat with you yet, I believe-that cavalry coat." "It's all I have had to wear, sir," was the answer as, rising, he took the garment from the arm of his chair and laid it upon the table, exposing a rent or gash, whereupon Captain Sumter took from an envelope a sliver of yellow cloth and fitted it into the gap. "This," said he, "I found on the hook of the storm sash, and this," laying beside it a rusty sheath knife, "was "there is no need of going over the later found under the snow close under the dormer window." Then, turning the overcoat inside out, he displayed on the back lining in stencil the name "Rawdon."

"And now." said Riggs, "we will hear the accused."

"It isn't necessary," began Button. "It is necessary, Colonel Button. Of course Mr. Lanier is not obliged to speak, but a few matters remain to be cleared up. There is yet the time honored problem of 'who struck Billy Pat-

"The matter is quite simple," said Lanier. "I went direct from the dancing room to my quarters. The fire was low, and I went back to call Rafferty. He didn't answer, so I had to lug in some fuel. His overcoat hung in the kitchen, and I put that on, and as I opened the back door there came the scream from up the row I saw others cunning toward Captain Sumter's as I started from the back gate. Then a man rushed past me, and then some body sprang from Captain Snaffle's and I went headlong I was on my bet in a second, but he had me right and left. Somebody else collided with us. We all went down. The ast man was up first and ran away with the first cap he could reach, and I followed, knowing now it wasn't fire, but robbery. Then when I realized ao life was in danger I remembered I was in arrest, dropped the chase and went straight to my quarters. Both hands were bruised and left badly cut. I am sorry, of course, to have struck Sergeant Fitzroy, but the language he used was vile, and it seemed to me the only way to convince him I was not Trooper Rawdon."

"Colonel Button, have you any ques-"Why didn't you tell me this?" demanded Button.

"I should have been glad to, colonel. Indeed, I tried to the last time I was in the office.'

"Well, gentlemen," said the colonel, we seem to have stirred up a pretty kettle of fish." Yet even Snaffle disowned complicity. He always had said Lanier was a perfect gentleman. And so ended Bob's arrest. Rawdon lingered for a word with Cassidy,

HOW DOES FAPA SEEM TO TAKE IT NOW? then followed, unhampered even by his arch enemy, Fitzroy, who slipped away to the stables three minutes after the close of the conference. But he was not even there when, along in the spring, Mr. and Mrs. Rawdon came out for a visit to Dr. Mayhew. Like Rawdon, he had received his discharge. Unlike Rawdon, there was serious objection to his re-enlistment. Even Snafile dare not "take him on"

It was not until mid-May that the bodies of the missing were found save that of Cary. Cary, who, having been given up for lost, turned up most unexpectedly the very day that Fitzroy, applicant for re-enlistment, was summarily turned down. But Cary came not of his own volition. He marched with a file of the guard. Cary's story was simple enough. Rawdon and Lowndes had hardly got away on the train when Sergeant Stowell and his party came searching. Cary hid. He was still half drunk. Some one told him of Kelly's arrest and charged him with that and with running off the Fosters' sleigh. He dared not face the music. He forgot his precious missive to Dora Mayhew until next day. Then the storm held him. Not until the fire night did he summon up courage to sneak home. He had no money left and could buy no more liquor. He stole into Lanier's back door to return the civilian suit and recover the cavalry blouse and trousers left hanging in Rafferty's room. He could hear the lieutenant moving about overhead. He had to strike a light. He struck several matches, found the clothes, slipped out of the "cits" and into his own. He was cold and numb. He knew there was liquor on the sideboard in the middle room. The craze was on him, and he risked it. He struck more matches and threw the burning stumps to the floor, drank his fill, then stumbled away, intending to give himself up to his first sergeant for absence without leave. Back round by way of the store and the east front he went. but before he could reach the barracks came the appalling cry of fire-Lanier's quarters-his doing beyond doubt, and now, in dismay and terror, he fled from the post. Poor Cary had Lanier to plead for him before his trial, but three months' hard labor was the least the law would allow.

By this time, too, another wedding was announced as near at hand. Only two days did Mr. Arnold and Aunt Agnes allow Miriam in which to prepare for the homeward journey, but it is safe to say that in that brief time their views of frontier life and people had undergone marked amendment, for they had found an old expounder of their faith in the post chaplain for one thing and many surprising facts as to officers, men and Indians for another. There came a bright wintry afternoon at the fag end of the year when the station platform held a lively little assembly waiting for the eastbound express. The colonel and his wife were there, the former by no means the bloodthirsty warrior of the elder's imagination The Stannards had come in, and the Sumters, Kate and Dad Ennis the chaplain, and both doctors, and all these surrounded the brother and sister and held them in cheery converse, while Bob and Miriam sauntered, self centered, away.

Lanier's eyes were glowing as he drew her to his heart and gazed down into the depths of those uplifted to his "That brute of a train has been late for a week," said he, "but today it

"And yet, after all, he turned to and painted me black as an imp of Satan. What had I done but good to him? I never took or won a penny of his." A moment of silence, then the fond eyes looked up. "You won something he wanted and thought was his. He never had any sense. Won't you try to forgive him for my sake, Bob?"

His arms went round and folded her closely, his face bowed down to hera. There was a wordless moment, then the sound of a distant whistle, of nearer shouts of "T-r-a-i-n!" The dark mustache, the unsinged side, was sweeping very, very near the soft curve of those parted lips.

"What ransom will you pay?" he murmured. "I've not yet felt these arms about my neck. I've kissed you, heaven be praised, but, Miriam, have

Its positively guaranteed for Stomach, Liver or Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c. at all druggists.

The First Postage Stamp. The postage stamp made its first appearance in 1839. Its invention is due to James Chalmers, a printer of Dundee, who died in 1863. England adopted the adhesive stamp, according to a decree of December 21, 1839, and issued the first stamps for public use on May 6, 1840. A year later they were introduced in the United States and Switzerland, and soon after in Bavaria, Belgium and France.
